At the theatre you can see plays for example Romeo and Juliet by Shakespeare or (1) plays in which the story is sung. In a play the (2) total number of actors is usually quite small, but in musicals you can often see a lot of people. One difference between the theatre and cinema is that you usually (3) reserve the tickets some time before the actual performance if you are going to the theatre. Another difference is that the (4) people watching the play, if they like it, (5) make noise with their hands at the end of the performance. This doesn't usually happen in the cinema.

Plays are performed on a (6) raised platform, films are shown on a (7) flat vertical surface. In the Czech Republic films in English are shown either with (8) translation across the bottom of the screen or they are (9) changed into Czech.
